Our Washington Letter. [SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE DAILY NEWS.]

THE NEW ORLEANS RIOT. Washington, January 14 .- Notwithstanding that the New Orleans riot has been a theme and a theory for an infinite degree of Radical loquacity and what, with a multiplicity of military and civil reports that have been previously evoked concerning that muddled affair, the country has a right to think that investigation in that quarter, at least, is thoroughly "played out;" and so it would be, had the late investigation of the Congressional trio sent thither to attempt a nominal prolongation of this inquiry been really devoted to that end-but it transpires that there was quite a different matter in view, not so much affecting the destruction of Dr. Dostie and his rictous crew, as looking to a support of the very effort—the overthrow of the prevailing government—by which the latter came to retribution. This week, perhaps to-morrow, I am informed, that the House Committee on Territories intend reporting the Bill providing for the reduction of the present Southern States governmental organizations to the status of territorial rule. It was in anticipation of this emergency that the New Orleans Committee was hurried off in the holiday recess to attempt the pretense of re-investigating the riot. A palpable ruse, to be recognized by the whole country so soon as the report shall appear. The Committee will go through the farce of submitting the evidence taken by them in relaof submitting the evidence taken by them in rela-tion to the riot, but the great volume of their re-port is to decry the assumed perversity and malig-nity of Louisianians, and bemoan the fate of the so-called "Southern loyalists," with allegations that they are persecuted and ostracized by all the masses of Sout ern society implicated in the rethe entering wedge adopted by every Representa-tive retained to submit an argument in favor of the territorial scheme, and it is now being sharp-ened and perfected with that special reference. Secral gentlemen of New Orleans are now in the city, who were called by the Committee to appear as witnesses. From them I gather that the entire conduct of the pretended investigation was most domineering and offensive. The very first thing the Committee did was to employ as a doorkeeper and messenger, a man named Mollicre, formerly of the Confederate service, more latterly formerly of the Confederate service, information a convict for forgery, and finally one of Gen. Butler's detectives during the immaculate administration of that redoubtable officer in New Orleans. In addition to this disagreeable action, the Committee affected a brow-beating style of interrogatory whenever the deponent before them did not happen to be a negro or one of their Southern loyalist pets. One fact, however, was deduced in reference to the iot which forms a fitting preface to the history of that affair, and comes now to light for the first In examining a Federal army officer, who had served five years in the late war, and been stationed a year or two in New Orleans, the Committee unexpectedly drew out the fact that he was known to the existence of a letter from two members of the Congressional Reconstruction Commit-tee, addressed to Michael Hahn, Dostie, and others of that ilk, about a month before the riot, in which the latter were enjoined by the writers that they must "go ahead and do the best they could. Louisiana was too remote from Congressional influence to come under the immediate direction of the Reconstruction Committee, but that, in any event, a convention for the reformation of the State Government of Louisiana must be held as specdily as possible." As this bit of unexpected evidence was woked, Messrs. Shellabarger and Elliot, of the Committee, became very nervous, the latter gentleman, in the excess of his zeal to suppress the unpalatable truth, more than once exclaiming to the witness: "Be careful, sir; we shall hold you to a strict account. You are talking of something you know nothing about!"

But the murder would out, and though this part of thirds on the Nebraska Bill.

Messrs. ameron and Conkling, Senators from Messrs. ameron and Conkling, Senators from some mysterious source in New Orleans. It is of some mysterious source in New Orleans. It is of great length, and most incautiously committal of the general line of plots and conspiracies which had been raised to subvort the State governments of the South, and particularly relating to the manof the South, and particularly relating to the management of the coup enjoined to be attempted in Louisiana. Who shall say that investigating committees are not efficacious, when it transpires that a trinity of corrupt judges evoke the truth and absolve the innocent, when no justice was intended? This last chapter in that "book of follies," dedicated the the New Orleans riot and Congressional. tod to the New Orleans riot and Congressional action thereon, comes greeting most opportunely. Not even with the martyred and immaculate Dostie and his comrades can the onus of the bloodshed of the New Orleans riot now be reposed. Here comes the documentary evidence to show that they did but too faithfully the bidding of their masters, the Washington Reconstruction committee, in the iniquitous work of calling the revolutionary convention of the 31st of July

'Who is to blame?" is a query that the whole country now can answer. NUBBASKA. The Nebraska Bill is having a hard time of it in Congress. After being tossed forward and back in the Senate, with a multiplicity of amendments tacked on to the original measure, the bill at last cmerged from that boo, and was reported to the House with no more Radical proviso than an amendment to the bill of admis ion, simply providing that Nebraska should not, at any future period, pass any law prescribing distinction on account of race or color. In the House, this afternoon, the opposition to the bill, because there was no guarantee for impartial or negro suffrage domanded of Nebraska, was of such violent description as to presage sure defeat. This is the second winter that Colorado and Nebraska have been compelled to stand knocking in the cold, with their respective brace of Senators in patient waiting respective brace of Senators in Patient Watering upon the elemency of Congress towards their plea for admission. From present appearances, the rigors of yet another season is in store for them; but they may have the consolation of hoping for better luck with the 40th Congress. THE ASPECT OF THE CAPITAL. Washington is sensibly relieved of the sombre, dreary aspect with which it opened the season, and if nothing occurs to upset the equanimity of the bean monde, such as the elopement of a Congressman with a fellow-member's wife, or the marriage of some one of the Washington belles to some titled attache of the Diplomatic Corps, I some titled allache of the Diplomatic Corps, I think matters may glide auspiciously on to something like gaiety and genteel jollification. The latter of the two apprehended disturbances hinted at above, I am sorry to say, is always deemed imminent by certain veteran dowagers who have the dispensation of several bundles of the marriageable article, and who cannot enter the field fairly, but persist in getting up the most interminable feuds with those who rival their claims. The corps ouence is, that if any one of the "sweet The consequence is, that if any one of the "sweet princes" of the foreign legations intimates, by a scries of delicate attentions to some fair one, that his intentions are other than "strictly dishonorable." all the competitors in the race take umbrage, and up goes the prospect of a dozen genial entertainments, because the mesdames in question are engaged in a social war that precludes a meeting of the antagonistic elements in the sations of "upper tendom." On Thursday next, the President gives his first govern, recention, and on the day precedent. his first general reception, and on the day preceding he dines the members of the diplomatic corps. Then comes a series of receptions and parties, under the conduct of members of the Cabinet, and Senators who maintain establishments in the civilians died. Our New York Letter.

[FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.]

New York, January 14 .- Victory has perched upon the tanner of the Excise Law army; it perched there on last Saturday night, remained there all day yesterday, and flapped its wings and crowed lustily-a bird of good omen looking down upon the sober thousands that were not so before on former Sabbath days. The pretty waiter-girl saloons were promptly closed on Saturday night ere twelve o'clock had struck; yesterday, with but perform, requested her parents to take her to the Winter Garden. Her wish was complied with; she saw the great tragedian, whose magnificent eyes turned her little head even more than his exquisite turned her little head even more than his exquisite acting. The next day, when the little eye-struck heroine went to school, she missed all her lessons, and talked so much Booth to her companions, that she turned the heads of more than one-half the school. On the day following she talked Booth more than ever, which had the effect of turning the heads of the balance of the school-girls, who forgot their geography, missed their grammar, ignored their arithmetic, despised their French, made mistakes in their compositions, and paid no attention to their estronomy, thinking of no star but one, and that the bright particular star, Edwin Booth. to their estronomy, thinking of no star but one, and that the bright particular star, Edwin Booth. The school-mistress remenstrated with the parents of the little revolutionist, and finally expelled her from the academy, which was fast growing to be from the academy, which was fast growing to be a lunatic asylum; meanwhile the little girl had followed Booth about the streets in hopes of finding out where he resided. It became necessary for her to be removed from the city; wherefore she was taken over to Brooklyn to spend a time with her aunt, but she began to pine away, and implored her aunt to take her once must be the Winter her prayers with more than usual devotedness; she then fell into a sweet sleep. In the middle of the night the little girl awoke, raised herself up in her bed, called to her aunt, pronounced the single word "Booth," and then fell back upon her snowy pillow most exceedingly and emphatically dead. There she lay, her soft silken ringlets hiding her snowy bosom; there she lay, her seeyes upturned to heaven, and her little rose nouth so fixed that she seemed to threaten to remark "Booth" once more, and then die again. This is the story that is told here by hundreds, and believed by many. You may take it on its own

It is said that there is nothing new under the sun. On Saturday night I certainly saw some-thing new under the moon, which shone down very prettily upon Oatman's Park, where the multitude, both skaters and non-skaters, viewed with surprise, not unmixed with admiration, the novel and ingenious contrivance known as Davega's Patent Skater's Support, invented by Isaac Davega, Esq., formerly of your city. It is certainly a most ingenious affair. It is shaped like a hoop-shirt, or rather like a mammoth baby-walker on ice, and it is impossible for one to fall when supported thereby—in fact your correspondent, who is no skater, tested the thing himself, and finds it a perfect success. It has been introduced at Oatman's Park, and will, no doubt, soon be in general use. I am pleased to perceive that a Southern man can sometimes possess ingenuity as well as a live Yankee.

as well as a live Yankee.

A few evenings ago, I attended, by special invitation, a rehearsal of the play of Married Life, to be performed soon by a party of amateurs, composed entirely of South Carolinians. There are ten characters in the dramatis personee, eight of which are personated by Charlestonians, and the remaining two by a young lady and gentleman from Sumter. The piece was performed most admira-bly at the rehearsal, and will soon be given in grand style at the private residence of one of your ex-citizens, before an audience in which Southerners will so largely predominate that we will forget for the moment that we are away from our good for the moment that we are away from our good and well beloved old home.

We were favored with a heavy fall of snow on Saturday night and Sunday, and the sleigh bells sound merrily again. The weather too, is still intensely cold, and the skaters enjoy themselves to their soul's and soles content. Day and night, night and day the slipping and sliding goes on, for this is a sport that can only be enjoyed at certain seasons, and so must be taken advantage of whilst it lasts. There are upwards of thirty thousand work women in this city, who, as they cannot afford to board in respectable localities, or rather respecta-ble houses—for all localities are pretty much the ble houses—for all localities are pretty much the same here—there are thousands of virtuous young women, I say, who are compelled to board in houses where they are exposed to all sorts of temptation; wherefore, it is proposed to establish a city boarding house for their benefit, and a num-ber of benevolent gentlemen have taken the thing in hand. At Wallack's "Ours" still running: Booth as "Bertuccio" in "The Fool's Raver.ge"—the little girl who remarked Booth and then died will not be present. "Black Crook," of course, at Niblo's Garden. A grand "Horse Comedy" at the New York Circus, and an old, played-out nigger drama "Uncle "Ton" at Barrange Massuerade, balls —"Uncle Tom"—at Barnum's. Masquerade balls in grand preparation, and a skating tournament next Wodnesday night, at Oatman's Park.

MOULTRIE.

State Items. MURDER OF COL. STEEDMAN BY NEGROES .- One of the bravest, best, most popular, most honorable, most amiable citizens of Lexington District—of all South Carolina—was Col. Marcellus Steedman, leader for some time during the late war, of the 6th S. C. Volunteers. Since the close of the war he has been living on his farm on Edisto, and been engaged at the same time in merchandise His dwelling and store were under the same roof. On Tuesday night, the 8th inst., he walked out into the piazza, and as he turned to go in, was shot by some person unseen. As he fell he cried out. His wife rushed forth, dragged him in and bolted the door. He survived but three hours. The wretched and bereaved woman, with her two ittle children, spent the whole night alone with the corpse, fearing to give the alarm.

Immediately upon the shot being fired, there was a hubbub of voices, and Col. Steedman recognized the state of the control of t nized those of two negro men, formerly slaves of his father. This, with their names, he disclosed to his wife before he died. And sure enough, on the following day the two monsters were arrested in Aiken. They made full confession. It seems that they had followed Sherconfession. It seems that they had followed Sherman when he passed through Lexington, and had not returned thither until a fortnight before the murder. This fortnight they had spent in watching their chance. They had no grudge against their former young master, but knowing that he was in business, they killed him with the design of getting money and robbing the store. They intended also to murder the lady and children, but with the first shot their learns failed them. We ith the first shot their hearts failed them. ake it for granted they are in Barnwell jail. Col.

Stoedman was only about thirty years of age. [Edgefield Advertiser. We see by the Orangeburg Times that, during the absence of the post commandant from that town, the garrison behaved in an outrageous mantown, the garrison behaved in an outrageous man-ner, halting citizens, demanding their pistols, &c., and firing upon those who refused to obey their commands. Several persons were beaten, and some shot, though not seriously. From the above it would seem that the war is not yet over.

BURNING OF THE KINGSTREE JAIL—REPORT OF THE CORONER'S INQUEST .- At a Jury of Inquest summoned to inquire into the cause and circumstances of the burning of the jail, the following verdict was rendered after four days' investiga-

That the twenty-two colored persons confined in That the twenty-two colored persons confined in the jail of Kingstree came to their deaths by the burning of said jail, wherein they were all consum-ed, except the portions of three bedies inspected by the jury. They further found that the fire ori-ginated between the ceiling overhead of the second floor and the floor of the third story; that it was communicated by some of the prisoners confined floor and the floor of the third story; that it was communicated by some of the prisoners confined in the jail, but whether communicated by accident or design the jury are unable to agree upon any conclusion. They also stated that had the jailor been in his proper place at the jail, and with the keys in his possession, when the jail was first discovered to be on fire, and when the alarm had first them given the three years and rechers more of been given, the three women, and perhaps more of the prisoners, could have been saved, and that for this neglect and dereliction of duty the Sheriff and Jailor are censurable. DeRackin. MILITARY ARREST.—Lieut. Hoss, commanding the garrison at this place, acting under instructions from Gen. Scott, of the Freedmen's Bureau, arrested Sheriff Matthews, James P. Barrineau and J. S. Bock on yesterdpy, and sent them to Charleston this morning. This arrest was made in consequence of their bong in charge of the jail which was recently destroyed by fire at this place.

These officers were arrested while in discharge of their duty on the District Court.

[Kingstree Star. THE EXODUS FOR TEXAS.—For the past two weeks our village and its surroundings have been infested with the negroes who are congregating here preparatory to migrating to Texas, and we believe some are destined for Florida. Among this mass of bone and sinew may be seen the grayhaired, decrepted old men and women, tottering with age and infirmity, and the infant at its mother's breast. We feel a solicitude for these poor, ignorant wanderers who have been reared among, ignorant wanderers who have been rearred among us. They are car ied away with the idea of going to what they are told is a better country, and many of them, we believe, with the notion that people can live there without laboring. They are enjoying themselves apparently, at this time, if one may judge from the manner in which they lounge about. They are to be seen at almost every street corner with a piece of bacon and a ludicrous grin corner with a piece of bacon and a ludierous grin on their countenances, indicative of a full stomach and nothing to do. Many of them, no doubt, think the day of "Jubalo am cum."—Ibid.

NEW RAILROAD BRIDGE .- Mossrs. Barnard NEW RATEROAD BRIDGE.—Blossis. Barnard Waldron, of Windsor, Vermont, have just completed a new railroad bridge across Black Rivor, at this place, for the Northeastern Railroad Company. The work is of most excellent finish and durability. It is what is called a timber lattice bridge, locked together at every place where the timbers intersect each other and fastened in their places by three-quarter inch iron bolts, and braced at the top and bottom, so that any swaying few exceptions, the bar-rooms and lager beer gardens opened not, and people who had nover before done without their Sunday drinks, dispensed with them, or took them quietly at home.

A most curious sensation story has been going the rounds here, the truth of which I will not endorse, but I will present it to your readers as I

The labor question, in our District, remains still in a very unsetled condition. Very many of our planters are unable yet to perfect their planting arrangements for the present year. Great restlessness and desire for change have been manifested on the part of the freedmen, and many plantations have been entirely evacuated by them. In some intances they have loft, without alleged com-plaint or grievance, and where their earnings were largest from the year's labor. There will, no doubt, be less land cultivated the present than was the past year. It is to be hoped, however, that better seasons and better cultivation will largely increase the product.—Sumler Watchman.

Peace in Europe. The London Times, in a late issue, speaking of the war cloud that is slowly covering the Eastern horizon, savs: Should, however, the contingency-in our opin ion as yet remote, but daily becoming less improbable—of an open collision between Turkey and Greece be realized, it is far from certain that it would at once bring the rest of Europe within its as we have often asserted, prepared at a moment's notice to face the "Eastern question." The result of the Crimean war put an end to all alliances, broke up all possible combinations, and gave rise to that isolation of every State which the wars of Italy and Germany subsequently brought into full evidence. Should the war with which we are now threatened actually break out. France and German. scope. There is no power in this part of the world, evidence. Should the war with which we are now threatened actually break out, France and Germany might find it necessary, Russia might deem it expedient, for some time at least, merely to look on. The real interests of Russia, no less than her present social and financial conditions, would seem to advise a temporizing policy; for the Christians of Turkey, she thinks, are winning her battles while fighting their own. France and Prussia are watching one another on the Rhine, and lie a long way from the Danube. Austria, whose aims should be castward, has neither a home aims should be castward, has neither a home nor a foreign policy; she has neither a sov-ereign, nor a statesman, nor a people. Should she be true to her destinies, she might, per-haps, still find in the Gorman elements within her empire, and in the corman elements within the tending and in her alliance with Prussia and Uni-ted Germany, the means of making up in the East for her losses in the West. As it is, however, Von Beust and the Magyars are more likely to involve her in the downfall of the Ottoman Empirethan to enable her to share its fragments. The mere at-tempt at an alliance with France would entail her ruin, for it would, as if by main force, throw Prussia into the arms of Russia, win the Upper Danube for the former, and leave the lower at the mercy of the Czar, or of a League of Roumanian, Servian, and other Princes, his dependents. As to England, we trust she would be the last to join in the melee. Faithful to our convictions that the fall of Turkey is certain, and that it is equally inadvisable to hasten or to regard it, we should, for our own part, be most willing to let events take their own course; and although we have as yet no great faith either in Greeks or in Romans, or in any other of the races once subject to the Porte, we could wish nothing better than that they alone should win what the Porte must lese, and that they should so grow in strength, in wisdom and in union, as to be able to hold their own against all

A BANQUET was given in New Orleans last Saturday night, to Mr. J. P. MAGUIRE, an Irish momber of the House of Commons; at which several distinguished Confederate Generals were present. Among other speakers present was General Hoop, who said: "The allusion of General Buckner to his gallant companion in arms, General Patrick Cleburne, re-called proud and mournful recollections. A terrible loss he was to so young and inexperienced a chief as him off. Well did he remember the last interview he had with that gallant commander. It was at the battle at Franklin, as the noble divis-ion which had been so highly disciplined, and which had been led in so many sanguinary battles by the heroic Cleburne, marched by him, as he (General Hood) scood on the hillside, near Franklin, Cleburne approached him and said: General Hood, I never was so sure of the victory as I am to-day. He passed on and was soon lost in the din of one of the most gallant assaults of the war.

The fight was won, but, alas, at such a cost. The noble form of Cleburne lay prostrate and lifeless on the parapet which had been so gallantly as-

"A NUGGET OF GOLD."-Under this caption the Davenport (Iowa) Gazette of the 8th contains the following interesting item : "Yesterday afternoon we had the pleasure "Yesterday afternoon we had the pleasure of seeing and handling a nugget of gold, intended as a present to Mrs. J. R. Grant, mother of General U. S. Grant, and brought from Colorado for her by E. A. Collins, Esq., of this city, the present owner of the nice little lump of precious metal. We were shown also a couple of letters from General Grant's father, now Postmaster at Covington, Kontroler, but formerly of Galera, Illinois, and a busitucky, but formerly of Galena, Illinois, and a business associate of Mr. Collins, in which letters Mr. Grant expresses surprise that Mr. Collins has selected Davenport as his future home, instead of Cincinnati, or Covington, or Philadelphia."

I have been for a year or more past in the habit of taking the water of the "Excelsior" Spring of Suratogs. Accustomed during the great portion of my invalid life to use the different waters of the several fountains which boil up along that remarkable valley, dependent, indeed, upon them for much of the comfort I enjoy, I am satisfied that the Excelsior Water is as well adapted as any other among them, if not more so, to the purposes for which they are generally employed. It is very agreeable, strongly impregnated with the carbonic acid, lively and sparkling, * * * I can heartily and conscientiously recommend it to all who need a gontle cathartic and diurctic.

HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS stand pre-eminent among medicinal preparations in this country. The demand for them is something wonderful, apparalleled; hence the counterfeiters knowfull well that if they can impose their flery fluids upon the people as that famous tonic, they can make fortunes by the fraud. They are now at work. Detectives are on the trail of some of them, and others have been already brought to book. Let the public second the proprietors in their efforts to buile the rockless scoundrels who seek at once to poison the community and swindle the firm that has produced the finest Vegetable Bitters ever manufactured Thinking to dodge the law, the counterfeiters are affixing to their bottles names resembling in orthography and sound that of HOSTETTER, such as "HOCUSTETTER," "HOOFSTETTER," and the like. Will the public be kind enough to look to this, and to see also that the label is all right, with its vignette of St. George and the Dragon, and its tiny note of hand, signed "HOSTETTER & SMITH?"
